DIAGNOSTIC IMAGING SERVICES
ACCESS PROTECTION ACT OF 2011

HON. PETE OLSON

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 27, 2011

Mr. OLSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today, along with 32 additional bipartisan House members, to introduce the Diagnostic Imaging Services Access Protection Act of 2011. I am introducing this legislation to preserve patient access to important, life-saving advanced diagnostic imaging services, including magnetic resonance imaging (MRI), computed tomography (CT), and ultrasound.

Radiologists are paid for the time, effort, and skill involved in interpreting images, rendering patient diagnoses, and reporting their findings as part of the medical record. A Proposed Rule by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) would cut the professional component reimbursement for radiologists by 50 percent through application of a multiple procedure payment reduction (MPPR) to the interpretation of multiple images for a single patient.

Under the Proposed Rule, CMS seeks to apply this MPPR policy to the professional component due to what we think is a flawed view that there are considerable "efficiencies" when the same patient receives multiple imaging services from the same radiologist during a single session. This substantial cut is a disservice to radiologists and ignores the fact that radiologists spend an equal amount of time, effort, and skill interpreting each diagnostic image, regardless of the number of images being examined, the section of the body being examined, or the particular date of the imaging service.

My legislation ensures that CMS does not arbitrarily undervalue the role of the radiologist within the health care delivery system. As you know, individuals receiving multiple imaging studies often represent the sickest and most complex patients seen by radiologists. Constituent radiologists contacting our offices in recent months have shared their concerns regarding the impact of this policy, particularly on patients who receive multiple scans during a single session and are typically affected by severe trauma, stroke, or widespread cancer.

Implementation of this flawed MPPR will disproportionately affect our most vulnerable patient population and could actually cost our health care system more in the long run. This action could force physicians who currently provide imaging services in a private practice setting to move to a hospital setting, causing these vital services to be reimbursed through the more expensive Hospital Outpatient Prospective Payment Schedule (HOPPS), rather than the Medicare Physician Fee Schedule.

I urge all Members of the House of Representatives to lend their support to this bipartisan legislation dedicated to preserving patient access to community-based diagnostic imaging services.

CALIFORNIA AND E-VERIFY

HON. KEN CALVERT

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 27, 2011

Mr. CALVERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring attention to a recent article in the Riverside Press Enterprise about E-Verify and the new California state law that will prevent cities and counties from requiring businesses to use E-Verify. It is disappointing that when so many other states are moving towards mandating E-Verify, California is going in the opposite direction. With unemployment at 12.1 percent in California, preventing cities and counties from using E-Verify to ensure local residents have an opportunity to work makes no sense. Instead, the state is protecting illegal immigrants who are employed illegally. Furthermore, federal law already requires businesses to hire a legal work force; allowing the use of E-Verify simply gives employers the tool to ensure they can comply with existing law.

Again, many of us in California are outraged by Governor Jerry Brown's decision to sign this bill and deny cities and counties their right to require use of the E-Verify program. It is telling that the Governor decided not to issue a statement announcing the signing of the legislation. The E-Verify program is overwhelmingly popular, with over 80 percent of Americans supporting its mandatory enactment. The Governor is wrong on this issue and I support local cities and counties that choose to challenge the constitutionality of this law.

REGION: CITIES SCRAMBLE IN WAKE OF E-VERIFY BILL

(By Kevin Pearson)

A number of Inland cities may be forced to repeal ordinances requiring businesses to verify that employees are not undocumented immigrants, now that the state has prohibited cities from mandating use of the federally run E-Verify system.

The law that was signed this month and goes into effect Jan. 1 left cities with few other options, but it has stoked the debate on both sides of the issue about the state's role in immigration issues.

E-Verify, created in 1996 by Rep. Ken Calvert, R-Corona, is operated by the Department of Homeland Security. It can be used to ensure that an employee has the legal right to work in the United States.

The new state legislation does not prohibit businesses or government entities, including cities and counties, from using E-Verify; it does prohibit making E-Verify's use a requirement to do business within those cities or counties.

In the past year and a half, Temecula, Murrieta, Lake Elsinore, Hemet, Menifee, Wildomar, Norco and San Bernardino County have passed ordinances requiring businesses to use the system, to varying degrees. The Inland area is home to the majority of municipalities in the state with such ordinances.

The state law comes as a bill is making its way through Congress that would require every business in the nation to use E-Verify, signaling that the issue between cities, states and the federal government may just be getting started.

"Right now, across America, various states and local governments are enacting mandatory E-Verify," Calvert said in a statement. "Meanwhile, California is going the other way . . . and in fact the Governor is signing laws to preempt the use of E-Verify. This is an outrage."

CITIES AFFECTED

When Gov. Jerry Brown signed the bill last week, he released no signing statement and the move largely flew under the radar. But the text of the bill cited the costs that businesses incur to implement the system, and concern about the accuracy of the system.

Though E-Verify is free to use, the bill noted that there could be a significant cost to businesses in staff time and other resources. And while Calvert's office boasts that E-Verify is 99.5 percent accurate, other studies have questioned that figure.

As word spread about the new bill, cities in Riverside County began working on how to react. Officials in some of those cities said they are still having internal discussions among city and legal staff.

City leaders said it is likely that most of the city councils will be asked to repeal the ordinance. Another option is a legal battle, but officials said that would be an unlikely choice because of costs.

In Temecula and Murrieta, there have been no reports of immigration violations since the E-Verify ordinances went into place. Staff for both southwest Riverside County cities said they did not view illegal immigration as a major issue in their towns.

"When you look at the whole issue, it's a federal issue," Temecula Deputy City Manager Grant Yates said. "When you look at actions across the country . . . the frustration is that at the federal level we don't have clear direction."

In Hemet, the city passed its ordinance in June and just recently got new business license paperwork with the E-Verify information on it. Staff members are now instructing applicants to ignore that language.

"California is a dysfunctional state and therefore it makes it difficult on local governments to implement this and a host of other issues," said Brian Ambrose, a Senior Management Analyst with the city of Murrieta. "Does this surprise me? No."

"The state legislature passed this bill, and if that's the legislature and governor's desire, we are content to do what they wish. (But) this is absolutely far from over."

FEDERAL ISSUE?

Many local city officials said they will keep a close eye on the federal push for the E-Verify system because they believe the federal government should be the one making the final decision on immigration issues.

Kathleen Kim, a professor at Loyola Law School in Los Angeles who specializes in immigration issues, said E-Verify should be dealt with on the national level and that asking private businesses to run immigration checks blurs the line between the public and private sector.

"I think the workplace should not be the location for immigration enforcement," Kim said. "E-Verify and the controversy over it is an example of why immigration enforcement should be taken out of the workplace and put in the hands of trained officers."

"This attempt to privatize immigration enforcement in the workplace can never find a comfortable solution."

Republican State Sen. Bill Emmerson said he opposed the state bill and that it goes against Brown's campaign for governor, during which he said he wanted to shift power to local agencies. Emmerson, whose 37th District includes Hemet, Menifee, Lake Elsinore, Moreno Valley and Corona, said he was surprised by the bill.

"It's another case of the state stepping in and not allowing local governments to use the tools available to them," Emmerson said. "To say they can't use a federal program seems not fair."

"The federal government has to be the level of government that steps up and makes the fix so states have a clearer policy of what to do."

LOCAL POLICIES

Hemet: All businesses in the city must check newly hired employees through E-Verify.

Lake Elsinore: All businesses in the city must check newly hired employees through E-Verify.

Menifee: All applicants for a business license must affirm their intent to use E-Verify.

Murrieta: All businesses in the city must check newly hired employees through E-Verify.

Norco: All businesses that have contracts with the city must use E-Verify.

San Bernardino County: All county contractors must use E-Verify.

Temecula: All businesses in the city must check newly hired employees through E-Verify.

HONORING THE SERVICE OF JOHN BRUCE TO THE ARMY

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 27, 2011

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, one of the enduring beliefs of life in America is that a person can rise through the ranks and achieve success through a combination of hard work, determination, and honesty. This link between hard work and success is one of our country's core values, and appropriately so. Our country is a better place because of the efforts of those who quietly go to work every day, meet the challenges of their jobs, and exceed expectations.
